

AUTOBODY AND COLLISION REPAIR GRADUATE AWARDS AT CENTENNIAL COLLEGE

Level Three Advanced apprenticeship students from Centennial College in Toronto recently were awarded industry recognition plaques and gifts over pizza and pop served in their classroom. The 17 graduates will now go back to work for their employers and soon write their "Red Seal" trades exam for trades licensing as Auto Body Collision Damage repair technicians. This "license" will allow them to apply their skills anywhere in Canada (except Quebec).

Presenting the awards and plaques were John Norris from the CIIA collision repair industry trade association and Peter Wrong of 3M Canada, a strong supporter of collision damage repair skills development in Canada
